Warwick, May 30th 2023. Following the resounding success of the inaugural E-Mobility Awards in January 2023, the organisers, Stratford Projects, have announced the Awards will run in 2024 and are now calling for entries. Entry forms need to be in by the June 30 2023, but extra time is allowed for the uploading of 1500-word submissions. All entries received will be reviewed impartially by an all-star judging panel made up of industry leaders.

The 2024 Awards have had the categories refined and focus on three distinct areas of Innovation, Ingenuity and Achievement.

The current Awards will further build on the success of the 2023 Awards that were hosted by TV presenter Quentin Willson at the British Motor Museum in Gaydon in January. At the Awards, a keynote was delivered by George Freeman MP, Minister of State for Science, Research and Innovation.

Matt MacNamara, development director at Stratford Projects said “The response to last year’s Awards was phenomenal and we aim to build on that success with an even better event. These Awards have been quickly established as one of the most coveted by those innovators working in the EV space and the wider e-mobility ecosystem. This year we aim to encourage the broadest possible range of companies from across the sector to enter the E-Mobility Awards, from cars, buses, boats, trucks and off-road vehicles, to charging infrastructure, new technologies right through to innovative EV financing models”.

With 30 categories to enter and win, plus one top Prix d'Honneur, decided by the judges from the category winners, innovators and disruptors are invited from across the mobility sector to enter and receive the recognition they deserve from a truly independent judging panel.

Entry forms need to be completed by June 30, but the full 1500-word submissions can be uploaded until Thursday July 20.
